VI. ALPHABETIC INDEX FOR COUNTY DATA 177

I. INTRODUCTION

This report on the personal income received by Kentuckians has been produced cooperatively by the Kentucky Council of Economic Advisors and the Kentucky Department of Commerce. The county income estimates were made by the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) in the spring of 1979. The Kentucky Council of Economic Advisors staff performed the computer analysis necessary to generate the tables, and also prepared the text. The Kentucky Department of Commerce assisted in the design of the report and was responsible for publication and distribution of this document.

This Year's Report

This report is one of a series of similar reports dating back to a study of the 1970 income data published in 1971. The format follows that adopted for last year's report. The personal income county and Area Development District (ADD)-level tables were produced by a special task program (BEATAB), of the Kentucky Economic Information System (KEIS).

As in the Kentucky Personal Income Reports of previous years, we have provided more current estimates for the United States and Kentucky than for the counties and ADDs since state-level and national data become available eight months in advance of the county estimates. The county-level estimates correspond to the 1976 and 1977 state-level estimates released in August 1978, and are the most current available county-level data. The 1977 and 1978 state-level data shown were released by BEA in September 1979. County-level estimates based upon these September 1979 state-level estimates are scheduled for release by BEA in April 1980. In other words, the county and state data presented here are at two different stages of revision and thus the county-level data do not add to the state totals shown. We have chosen to present the data in this manner because we believe that the user is more interested in the most current estimates than in comparability between state and county data.

How to Use the Tables

The tables in this report can be used in a number of ways. It is possible, for example, to examine growth acceleration within an economy, to compare the growth of that economy with the growth of others, or to study the structural characteristics of an economy. Assessments of these types can be made using the detailed tables for the United States, Kentucky, each ADD and each county.

Growth acceleration is simply the increase or decrease in the rate of growth of some component of personal income from one year to another. For example, Table 2 (page 5) shows that wage and salary disbursements in Kentucky increased by 11.62 percent from 1976 to 1977 (column 3) and by 13.13 percent from 1977 to 1978 (column 6). Similar comparisons could be made for the other components of personal income: other labor income, proprietors' income (farm and nonfarm), labor and proprietors' income by industry, personal contributions for social insurance (a deduction from personal income), the residence adjustment (which shifts the income of commuters from their place of work to their place of residence), property income (dividend, interest and rent), and transfer payments (federal retirement, disability and health insurance payments, veterans' benefits, unemployment insurance payments, income maintenance payments, etc.).

It is interesting to note that the overall percentage rate of change, or growth, was greater from 1977-78 than from 1976-77 for wage and salary disbursements and other labor income but less strong during these same years for proprietors' income. Also, the rate of growth in labor and proprietors' income in mining, manufacturing, transportation, communication and public utilities was not as great from 1977-78 as it had been in 1976-77, while it was stronger, in those years, in construction, wholesale and retail trade, and services, for example.

The tables do not however explain why the growth of different components of personal income is accelerating or decelerating. The user must look beyond the data reported to discover the underlying factors contributing to change. As an example, if we recall that there was a miners' strike in the winter, 1977-78, we begin to understand why labor and proprietors' income in mining grew at a slower rate in 1977-78 than it had from 1976-77.

In trying to determine why the growth of different components of personal income is accelerating or decelerating, it is also often necessary to gather further information about a particular industry on the national or state level. For example, the reader should be aware that at the time these county-level data were released by BEA (April 1979), the estimates for 1976 and 1977 coal mining proprietors' income showed losses on the national level of $271 million in 1976 and $406 million in 1977. The estimates for the Kentucky portion of coal mining proprietors' income in 1976 and 1977 were negative $72 million and negative $108 million, respectively. These estimates of losses for proprietors in one of Kentucky's major industries are reflected in the overall values and percentage changes in total personal income, per capita personal income, total labor and proprietors' income, total proprietors' income, nonfarm proprietors' income, and labor and proprietors' mining income categories. These estimated losses have been incorporated into the county-level estimates.

The allocation of the county level-estimates of proprietors' losses in coal mining, does not correspond, in all instances, to what is known about the coal industry in the Commonwealth. We have therefore made the 1976 and 1977 value for labor and proprietors' income in mining in Calloway, Jefferson, Larue, Lewis, Mercer, and Washington Counties a "NA" (not available), but the amounts are still reflected in the total labor and proprietors' income and related categories. The values released by BEA for these counties were negative amounts. There have been no other changes made in the values estimated by BEA for any other series.

Growth comparisons can be made for any component of personal income between geographic areas. For example, we find that total personal income by place of residence grew, at the same rate, between 1977 and 1978, in Kentucky, as in the United States as a whole (Tables 1 and 2, column 6). Personal income by place of residence had also grown at the same rate in Kentucky and the U.S. from 1976 to 1977, but the experience since the mid-1960, had generally been that Kentucky personal income was growing relatively faster than was personal income nationwide. Thus, Kentucky personal income growth has, for two years in a row, leveled off to the same rate of growth as that of the U.S.

Structural characteristics of an economy can be studied through the "percent of total" columns, 2 and 5. Comparisons can be made with the past and with other economies. For example, labor and proprietors' income in construction increased its share of total Kentucky personal income from 4.74 percent in 1977 to 5.28 percent in 1978

(Table 2), indicating that, at least in 1978, the construction industry increased its share of total Kentucky personal income by a larger relative amount (.54 percent) than any other industry. Table 1 shows that labor and proprietors' income in the construction industry in the United States was 4.52 percent of total labor and proprietors' income in 1977 and 4.66 percent of total labor and proprietors' income in 1978. Therefore the proportional contribution of labor and proprietors' income in the construction industry to total labor and proprietors' income is greater, in 1977 and 1978, in Kentucky than in the U.S.

Comparisons can be made not only by industry, but also by type of income. For example, transfer payments, while diminishing in importance in Kentucky between 1977 and 1978 (Table 2), are still a larger share of Kentucky than U.S. personal income (Tables 1 and 2). Table 5 gives a more detailed report of transfer payments to Kentuckians, 1974-78.

Several other tables are also contained in the report: Tables 3 and 4 rank Kentucky's per capita income with that of other states in 1973 and 1978 and Tables 6 and 7 rank the per capita income of the Kentucky counties in 1972 and 1977; Tables 8 and 9 provide similar data for the Area Development Districts. Tables 3 and 4 can be used to examine Kentucky's current position among the states, and its progress over the past five years on one (but not the only) measure of economic attainment, while Tables 6 through 9 allow the same analysis for the counties and ADDs.

Conclusion

A discussion of the methodology of personal income estimation and a glossary of terms follow the tables. # IV. DATA AND METHODOLOGY*

This chapter describes the concepts, methods, and procedures used by BEA in developing the personal income estimates contained in this report. The definition of personal income, as used in the national income and product accounts, and the means by which the responsible federal agencies acquire personal income data (as they may become available) are discussed.

The Personal Income Concept

Personal Income, as defined by the concept of the national income and product accounts, can be split into two major categories: Labor Compensation, and Unearned Income (where the separation is made in terms of whether or not direct labor services are provided in return for a contractual payment of some type). The compensation of labor can be direct cash payment, payment in kind, or payments on behalf of an individual to a third party (as in the case of life insurance premiums or other fringe benefits).

Labor Compensation

Within the category of Labor Compensation, there are two direct payment components: Wage and Salary Income and Net Proprietors' Income. The latter can be further divided into Farm Proprietors' Net Income and Nonfarm Proprietors' Net Income. There is one indirect payment component, Other Labor Income, and one item is subtracted, Personal Contributions for Social Insurance. Other Labor Income includes employer contributions under private pension, health, welfare and group insurance plans. It also includes compensation for injuries, directors' fees, pay of military reservists, and several other minor items. Personal Contributions for Social Insurance are subtracted on the logic that while these are part of an individual's earnings, they are not received by the individual in the current period.

Wage and Salary Income. Wage and Salary Income consists mainly of cash earnings; these data come mainly from employers' unemployment insurance returns, which are collected by the Kentucky Department for Human Resources and reported to the U.S. Department of Commerce. Wage and Salary Income also includes estimated values (imputations) for food, clothing, and lodging provided to individuals by their employers; these amounts are estimated by the U.S. Department of Commerce based on census and tax data.

In addition, within the military payroll category, Wage and Salary Income by geographic area also includes both the gross earnings of military personnel stationed in the area–less amounts withheld by the U.S. government and sent to dependents elsewhere–and payments to dependents of military personnel who are living in the area separately from the military personnel. Thus, while direct wage and salary payments make up the bulk of what is called Wage and Salary Income, these are not the whole of the category.

Proprietors' Income. The Proprietors' Income category represents the profits of proprietors; that is, gross income less total production expenses. Farm Proprietors' Net Income is the best-defined of the components and is based upon data that are collected by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Gross income from farming is the sum of five items: (1) cash receipts from farm marketing, (2) government payments to farmers, (3) value of food and fuel produced and consumed on farms, (4) the gross rental value of farm dwellings, and (5) the value of the change in inventories of crops and livestock. Farm production expenses consist of approximately forty-five separate items, and include such things as payments to hired farm workers, depreciation of farm equipment, and payments for fertilizer, seed, and livestock.

Nonfarm Proprietors' Net Income includes both professional services and business net income. The estimate includes a capital consumption adjustment. Net income of professional persons is determined somewhat arbitrarily by determining the average net income for the various professions, nationally, and then multiplying these values individually by the number of professional people of each type working in the geographic area. The population censuses are used to determine the number of professional persons. Business net income is also determined on the basis of national data, with allocations being made using Internal Revenue data on taxes as well as data on self-employment contributions for social insurance obtained from the Social Security Administration. As a consequence of the indirectness involved in the estimates of Nonfarm Proprietors' Income, this component is especially subject to revision and is also likely to contain significant errors of measurement.

Total Labor and Proprietors' Income is presented in two ways: first, the income is divided into the categories of Wages and Salaries, Other Labor Income, and Proprietors' Income (farm and nonfarm); second, Labor and Proprietors' Income are combined and classified by kind of employer (farm, private nonfarm, government) and general industry (manufacturing, mining, etc.).

Unearned Income

The Unearned Income component of personal income includes property income and transfer payments. Property income is made up of three components: (1) rental income of persons, (2) dividends, and (3) personal interest income. Transfer payments include payments by federal, state, and local governments to persons for which no services are rendered, and also transfers to persons from business for which no services are rendered.

Property Income. Considering first property income, the dividends category is the only category which entirely consists of cash payments. The basis for the estimates of dividends is tax return data obtained from the Internal Revenue Service. These estimates are, however, adjusted so as to reconcile the total for all states to the national estimates of dividends paid to persons, and an allocation of the difference between the original total for all states and the national total is made on the basis of the proportional state shares.

Interest income and rental income each consist of both a monetary and an imputed component. The monetary component of interest is the sum of net interest payments by government and business. The imputed component of interest payments consists of: (1) property income withheld by life insurance companies on the account of policy holders, (2) property income withheld by mutual savings banks on account of depositors, (3) the value of financial services received by persons from commercial banks without explicit payment, and (4) value of financial services received by persons from other financial intermediaries such as savings and loan associations and credit unions.

The monetary component of rental income is composed of direct rental payments to persons. The imputed components, an important category, consists of an estimate of the net income received from owner-occupied dwellings. Conceptually, this item is defined as the gross rental value of owner-occupied dwellings less the cost of home ownership. In fact, the national totals are allocated to the states on the basis of the market values of owner-occupied dwellings using census of housing data. This procedure involves the assumption that the rate of capitalization of net return is the same for each state (and county) as for the country as a whole.

Transfer Payments. There are two main subdivisions of transfer payments: government transfer payments, and business transfer payments. Government transfer payments include a variety of individual items, such as social security payments, unemployment compensation payments, and various types of welfare payments, as well as government pensions and government funded scholarships and fellowships. In addition, there are a few minor items included, such as government life insurance benefits, mustering-out payments to veterans, and the profits of PX and ships stores. The latter are included in personal income because such profits are returned to enlisted personnel in the form of various types of benefits.

Business transfer payments included three principle categories: (1) corporate gifts to nonprofit institutions, (2) consumer bad debts, and (3) other business transfers. Corporate gifts to nonprofit institutions are included because the latter are treated in the personal sector in the national income and product accounts. Consumer bad debts are included because these are transfers from the business sector to the personal sector for which there is no quid pro quo. Other business transfers include cash prizes, unrecovered thefts from business and cash and capital assets, and personal injury payments by business to persons other than employees. All these items are estimated by the allocation of national totals to the states using the state estimates of the sum of payrolls and Nonfarm Proprietors' Net Income.

Data Sources

Income

The income data and per capita income estimates included in this report were based on data provided by the Regional Economic Measurement Division of the Bureau of Economic Analysis, U.S. Department of Commerce (BEA).[1] The data provided by BEA include county data, data from the seven Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas (SMSAs) in, or bordering Kentucky, and comparable data for the state and nation. These data were received in computer printout form and on magnetic tape by the KCEA in April 1979, and cover the years 1972 to 1977. Data for 1972-76 are revisions of earlier estimates. Therefore, if one wishes to compare the data in this report with data for earlier years, one needs to compare them with revisions to the previously published data. All of the revised data are stored in the Kentucky Economic Information System. In September 1979, BEA also sent estimates of 1978 personal income for Kentucky and the United States.[2] The publication of these estimates, by BEA, is forthcoming.

Population

Population in census years comes directly from the census and is considered firm. Kentucky population for noncensus years is estimated by the U.S. Bureau of the Census in cooperation with the Urban Studies Center, University of Louisville,[3] and is based on (1) birth and death statistics and (2) migration rates estimated from reported address changes on a sample of tax returns. State population estimates are revised regularly, with the changes being distributed among counties.

The population estimates are officially released rounded to the nearest hundred persons. However, the population data used by BEA to calculate per capita income is actually an estimate to the person. Thus if one divides total county personal income (by place of residence) by the official county population estimate, which is reproduced in the tables included in this report (and which is the only publicly available population estimate), the result is generally not the same as the BEA per capita county figure. The BEA per capita figure is the official per capita figure and is therefore the one published in this report.

Estimation Methodology

The methodology used by the Bureau of Economic Analysis in estimating 1977 county income is described in "A Summary Description of the Sources and Methods Used in Estimating County Personal Income 1969-74."[4] A summary of this methodology is provided in the Kentucky Economic Information User Manual.[5] A critical review of BEA's methods in the estimation of state and county personal income can also be found in a study by Lawrence K. Lynch.[6] The methodology depends heavily on allocation, i.e., dividing state figures among the counties.

If the BEA estimate of any value of personal income is less than $50 thousand or if BEA has not released the data in order to avoid disclosure of confidential information, the data value is shown as NA. If any county within an ADD has a value of NA for any given series, the ADD-level value of that series also appears as NA. BEA has determined that disclosure to the KCEA, and publication in this report, of the ADD-level totals for these series could potentially compromise the otherwise undisclosed value of some county-level data, and hence BEA will not release the ADD-level estimates.

*Editor's Note: A chapter on personal income data and methodology has been included each year since the publication of the Kentucky Personal Income Study, 1975. It was written by Charles G. Renfro and has subsequently been revised slightly each year. The section, "The Personal Income Concept," is unchanged. Paul Coomes subsequently revised the sections on data sources and estimation methodology and they have again been revised in this report.

V. GLOSSARY OF TERMS*

Some of the terms and concepts used in reporting personal income may not be familiar to all readers. In this glossary, brief definitions are given for some principal terms used in the tables.

Constant Dollars – Because of inflation, the purchasing power of a dollar declines over time. For instance, a product costing $1.00 in 1972 might have cost (on average) $1.38 in 1975. Thus, a family earning $10,000 in 1972 and $13,800 in 1975 has no increase in its buying power. Certain figures in these tables are given in terms of "constant (1972) dollars," meaning that the number given is not a current dollar figure, but rather the number of dollars that would have bought the same amount of goods in 1972.

Other Labor Income – This consists primarily of employer contributions to pension, health, and welfare funds.

Per Capita Income – The per capita income in a region is the total personal income of all residents, divided by the population. Figures in this study follow the concept of total personal income used by the Bureau of Economic Analysis, which includes such things as estimates of the value of pay-in-kind, food grown and consumed on the farm, and rental value of owner-occupied dwellings. For instance, for 1977 BEA estimated Kentucky per capita income as $5,957. Yet, another estimate by BEA was that disposable income (total personal income less income taxes) was $5,173 per person.

Place of Work/Place of Residence – Wage and salary statistics are generally gathered from employer reports and thus show income at the employee's workplace, rather than at his place of residence. To make the total personal income in a region reflect the income of those living there rather than those working there, it is necessary to include a "residence adjustment" reflecting money carried from one region to another. Such an adjustment has been done in this report; the total personal income figures are thus "residence adjusted" and are "by place of residence."

Residence Adjustment – This is an estimate of the amount of money carried into the region by persons living in it but working elsewhere, less the amount carried out by persons living outside but working inside the region.

Total Personal Income – Total Personal Income includes both money and nonmoney income. Money income includes money wages and salaries, income from self-employment, and income other than earnings (e.g., social security pensions, dividends, interests, rents, welfare, alimony, etc.). It does not include profits on sale of property, lump-sum inheritances, gifts, or income tax refunds. Nonmoney income includes such other things as the value of food grown and consumed on a farm, housing provided an apartment manager, and the equivalent rental value of a home owned and occupied by an individual or family.

Transfer Payments – This income category includes social security, unemployment compensation, public assistance, private pensions, veteran's benefits, college scholarships, and other payments for which no current service is performed.

Wage and Salaries – Figures shown for Wages and Salaries also include estimates of such things as tips, pay-in-kind, food grown and consumed on the farm, fees for services, and so on.

*Editor's Note: This glossary first appeared in the Kentucky Personal Income Study, 1975. It has been revised slightly each year.
